

This thing is taking over the music industry...

I know that sounds strange lol, but let me explain.

As I mentioned yesterday, we've been working on a secret project called PARADISE.

(Read this email to grab your free taste of the project.)

And lately my team has spent countless hours diving into the underground music scene for creative inspiration.

But there's something unusual that inspired this project, and most producers would never even guess it...

The PlayStation 1.

Have you ever heard about the PlayStation inspired playlists on Youtube or Soundcloud?

I had no idea there was such a deeply rooted culture and following behind it in the music scene.

And it's undeniable how much the aesthetic plays a role in its attraction to such a wide audience.

Between the ethereal pads & chords that echo heavy waves of nostalgia, to the fast paced drum breaks...

We stumbled onto something special when we went down a rabbit hole of early 2000s inspired Jungle / DnB.

And I was even more shocked when I realized that big artists like Fred Again were tapping into this same magic.

We've never attempted anything like this at Cymatics, so I was shocked when my team sent over these sounds...

Honestly words don't do it justice, so I want you to experience it first hand.
